Picking Up Mush Room Hunters Raises Sheriff's Ire

During the past two months farmers owning any stump or timber land near Mokena were pestered to distraction by hordes of Cook county and Joliet Italians, Greeks and Poles, who proceeded to make themselves at home. They took entire possession of many pasture lands regardless of "keep out" signs or verbal protests on the part of the farm owners or tenants.

At the Albert Fitzer and Cleveland farms south of Mokena nine cars were found parked at one time on a Sunday morning while sixty to seventy men, women and children roamed about the premises. Two pasture gates were left open and several fences completely wrecked, in order that the women and children mushroom pickers might have easy access.

At the Greenwood and Roberts farms, conditions were found to be as bad or worse.

Many of these wicked looking men, carried fourteen-inch butcher knives, which they flourished in a threatening manner when disturbed. One car driver, leaving a field with half a ton of mushrooms, offered to sell a sack full to a farmer at a price of 40 cents a pound.

Conditions finally became so intolerable that farmers, Fitzer, Roberts, Cleveland and Greenwood appealed to deputy sheriff, John Frisch of Mokena, with a demand that he arrest any marauders found on their premises.

Deputy Frisch consulted the Sheriff's office in Joliet, and was told to clean up the situation as best he could. As a result, a whole procession of cars filled with mushroom pickers, were taken by Deputy Frisch to the office of Magistrate Schultz, in Mokena, where the men of each party were assessed costs while the women and children were permitted to go free.

Now comes the "shock stuff". It appears that among the army of "no speaka da Englis", nuisances, there may have been some friends of the Will County Sheriff's office, for on last Sunday, the Sheriff appeared on the scene very angry, demanding the star, and card of credentials of Deputy Frisch, and threatening all concerned in the "Woppy" roundup.

One feels forced to ask: "What is a farmer to do, should he find thieves in his chicken roost, or what is the villager to do, should he awake to find a burglar in his bedroom?"

LAWLESS HUNTERS CAUSE MUCH TROUBLE

The six day open season for hunting cock pheasants, closed on Tuesday evening of this week and during those six days any person driving over the highways of Will county could distinguish violations of the State Game Code on every side of the road. Most of the infractions of the law were of a minor nature and came about through a misunderstanding. While ignorance is no excuse in law, deputy game wardens called upon to keep some semblance of order in the Will County district, made no attempt to arrest every farm boy who chanced to stray over out permission or who had neglected the formality of securing a license before reaching through the border fence to pick up a dead rabbit.

The more flagrant violations, such as shooting hen pheasants, the entering of farmers posted premises into a neighbors property without auto loads of foreigners coming out from Chicago to hunt without a license, shooting more birds than the limit provided in the game code, were met with the prompt action and severity which they deserved.

One farmer near Monee was ordered out of his own field when he tried to oust a gang of seven hunters who were tramping through his standing corn. Another farmer received a dose of spent bird shot in his head, he had climbed a willow tree in a field of tall grass searching for a cow and calf. The hunters thought his brown hat to be a pheasant. A farmer near Mokena watched a group of men leave a car with guns and was astonished to see them knock his "No hunting allowed" sign off a tree before turning their dogs loose in his field.

Section 24 (b) of the Illinois law reads "It shall be unlawful for any person to trap or hunt with a gun or dog, or allow a dog to hunt within or upon the land of another or up on waters flowing over or standing on the land of another, where notice that hunting or trespassing is forbidden, is posted or exhibited in a conspicuous place on such land, or where the owner, agent of the owner or occupant has expressly forbidden hunting or trespassing on such land by publication in a local newspaper".

In other or plainer language, a hunter has a legal right to enter land upon which he finds no sign conspicuously posted or if he can take the sign down without being caught at it unless and here comes the catch, which turns the joke on the hunter, unless the owner or tenant has advertised in a local paper, the fact that he reserves the right to control hunting on his own land.

A Deputy Warden was called upon to remove hunters from a local farmers timber but found upon his arrival at the place that he could do nothing in the case for the reason that no signs were conspicuously posted. A sign of large size lay bottom up on the ground, however, that farmer has since advertised his name in the Mokena News-Bulletin in order to be on the safe side in his efforts to protect his property.

A Frankfort Deputy brought in a Chicago hunter who had shot and hidden a hen pheasant, another fellow who left Chicago Heights without his license, also many hunters who entered posted or advertised and without permission.

The hen pheasant hunter was assessed a fine of twenty-five dollars and costs by Justice Kohlhaugen.

Home boys who go out after game should understand that the law applies to their actions just as well as to the fellow from Chicago. Boys under sixteen years of age are not allowed to carry guns. Hunting on public highways is dangerous, hunting on railroad property is forbidden, a passenger on a train was badly injured some two years ago through the carelessness of a shot gun totter.

The owner of a dog is liable for a fine of $15 to $100.00 if his dog goes hunting on the posted or advertised land of another person.

The officers job of undertaking to assist farmers in protecting their property from hunters is not a pleasant occupation.

One land owner who was known for his affability to hunters has recently become hard boiled. He had a horse shot in the hip with a rifle. The farmer who calls an officer out to remove from his field and who later refused to prosecute, deserves no protection.

CLIFFORD MAHONEY OF MOKENA WINS RADIO PRIZE FOR BEST ESSAY

Ten juvenile listeners of the twin stations, W E B H and W J J D, who are members of the Aichance Club conducted by Harry "Dream Daddy" Davis, at 5:45 each afternoon except Sunday, are going to receive full boxes of luscious apples as prizes for the letter they wrote about apples.

They heard about the contest through broadcasts by the Chicago publicity committee of national apple week over "Dream Daddy's" broadcast period. The prize winners are:

Clifford Mahoney, Mokena, Ill., Georgia Russell, Martinton, Ill., Violet Black Hazel Crest, Ill., Berntha M. Wing Pecatonica, Ill., Helen M. Kracker Kouts, Ind., Omar Lett Poplar Grove, Ill., Grace Ver Halen Chicago, Rudolph Mendelsohn Chicago, Mary W. Benton Wheaton, Ill., and Teresa Teale Milwaukee.

The generous samples of the pick of the nation's apple crop will be shipped, prepaid express, to the winners tomorrow morning.

500 TOURNAMENT TO BE STAGED AT THE SAENGER HALL, TINLEY PARK

A Five Hundred Tournament, inviting all rival neighboring towns in Southern Cook County and portions of Will County, to compete for championship prizes, inaugurating the first sectional meet ever held in this part of the country, will be staged Thursday evening, December 1st, in the Saenger Hall.

All neighboring communities are invited to attend.

Old, as well as young, may enter the meet. Tables will be arranged for each respective locality and accurate scores will be recorded by an official group.

Elaborate plans are being arranged to make this one of the out-

SPEAKERS FOR MOKENA M. E. ANNIVERSARY ARE ANNOUNCED

Rev. Glen T. Beaty, pastor of the Mokena M. E. church, states that the response to his endeavor to obtain some of the best speakers of the country for the programs of the 60th Anniversary of the dedication of that church, December 15th to 18th, has been far beyond his expectations. He felt that the community would be fortunate if he succeeded in obtaining the services of even two of the list of tentative speakers which he announced last week. However, in answer to his letters of request the pastor received a full response, provided he could adjust the particular service at which he wished the individual so that there would be no conflict in their programs. Therefore, even at this early date, the speakers are assigned to their particular time and the program has shaped itself something as follows: there may be minor changes as the Anniversary draws near.

Thursday, December 15th at 7:45 p. m., The "New Age" Service. Dr. W. E. J. Gratz, Editor of the Epworth Herald, the young people's religious magazine, will be the speaker. Dr. Gratz belongs to the young people of the Methodist church and is constantly in demand as lecturer all over the country. While the Mokena church does not have an Epworth League, they are sending out special invitations to all the young people's organizations nearby. The definite subject of Dr. Gratz's lecture will be given later.

Friday, December 16th, 7:45 p. m. The "History of our Church" service. Dr. E. C. Lumsden will be with us and address us. Dr. Lumsden has labored in the ministry for many years in this conference of the M. E. church and knows much of the earlier days in these parts. The history of the church compiled by Rev. Mr. Beaty and others will be read at this service. It will prove very interesting to all people of this section.

Saturday, December 17th, 7:45 p. m., Religious Education. Professor Frank G. Lankard of Northwestern University, an expert in Sunday School work as well as other religious educational work, will speak. Every parent is invited to hear this expert on child life and education. Special invitations are being sent to all Sunday School teachers and public school teachers and Parent-Teacher's Organizations for this service.

Sunday, December 18th, time to be announced. The "Community Vision" Service. Professor Frank O. Beck, prominent church sociologist and community organizer will be the speaker and will tell of his many experiences in the developing suburban centers around Chicago for the past twenty-five years. This will be the climaxing program of the series. The plan is to have a re-dedication exercise as the closing event of the Anniversary which is the biggest affair the community has had in many years. Much interest is being shown by other communities in the Mokena celebration.

Big crowds are expected at all of the services.

REV. CHANEY OF TENNESSEE, NEW M. E. PASTOR AT TINLEY PARK

Rev. J. L. Chaney, the new pastor of the Tinley Park Methodist church assumed the responsibility of the charge, the first Sunday in November.

Rev. Chaney is a native of North Carolina, but is recently from Tennessee, where he attended the University of Chattanooga. He received his A. B. Degree from that Institution in 1926.

While a student of the University, he was pastor of the Avondale Methodist Episcopal Church at East Chattanooga, Tenn. During his pastorate there, the church membership grew from 162 to 438.

In addition to his church responsibilities, Rev. Chaney is pursuing studies in Garrett Biblical Institute in Evanston, Ill.

It is his earnest prayer, and sincere desire, that he, serving in the capacity of a minister of Jesus Christ, and as pastor of the Tinley Park Methodist church, may be used in the greatest possible way in co-operation with other Churches and all organizations of the Christian Church, may help to accomplish the purpose for which Christ gave his life, "The Salvation of Mankind." Tinley Park Methodist Church is ready and anxious to serve you in any way that it possibly can.

NEWS AND NOTES OF TINLEY PARK

A party and miscellaneous shower was given the new minister Rev. J. L. Chaney and family last week as a means of demonstrating the warm reception felt for this pastor of the English Methodist church. Congratulations and good wishes were showered on the family as well as baskets of good things to eat. Mr. Chaney is taking a special Theology course in Garrett Institute, therefore his being able to serve the English Methodist church as pastor.

He comes highly recommended from Chattanooga, Tenn., and indeed Tinley Park is fortunate to secure one who is so capable and God fearing.

The County Conference of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs closed in a magnificent manner at the new Stevens Hotel last week. The 3rd and 4th floors of this lovely hotel were needed to accommodate the hundreds of women who gathered there from all parts past week.

of the state in the interest of Art, Education and thirteen other departments of work carried on throughout the world by club women. After the adjournment of committees at 1 o'clock a specially arranged luncheon was served in the banquet room to 800 women.

Prominent speakers and music featured the afternoon program. Mrs. Wallace B. Combs of Tinley Park, Mrs. F. Nichols and Mrs. John Runkle of Blue Island numbered among those present.

The Royal Neighbors held a bake sale in Hick and Mesenbrink's store which netted quite a tidy sum.

The Garden Club will meet Friday afternoon November 25 at 2 p. m. in the Gift Shop.

Old Mother Nature played rather an unkind trick "Father's Night", Nov. 11, when she allowed her storm-child such activities. How ever those who braved the storm, and reached the school house, had the very special privilege of hearing an especially fine lecture, given by Dr. Frank Maple, his subject being, "Giving Your Child A Chance."

Dr. Maple, is a member of the Illinois State Medical Society, and also associated with the Chicago University, where he lectures twice each week. Tinley Park was very fortunate indeed, in being able to procure such an eminent speaker.

The occasion being also the anniversary of Armistice, the following program was presented:

Opening chorus Audience
The Star Spangled Banner
Patriotic Tableau..... Dick Swisher, Boy Scout; Lois Klepper, Red Cross Nurse; and Charles Nelson, Cadet.

ORLAND PARK WANTS GAS

In 1925 the village board of Orland Park gave the Public Service Co., a gas franchise, but so far no gas mains have been laid.

Residents of this village are anxious to have gas service. The board has instructed their attorney Albert Krusemarck to take the matter up with the Public Service Co., and get project started.

MOKENA RAILROAD MAN PROMOTED

John Horrace of Mokena was made happy the past week when he was promoted to the position of fireman on a Rock Island passenger train. Mr. Horrace served as fireman and at one time was engineer of the Golden State Limited. About 7 years ago he met with an accident which impaired his eyesight and he could not remain on the road. He has been working in the round house at Blue Island. His eyesight has improved wonderfully and he recently passed a test for fireman with excellent results. He made his first trip from Chicago to Peoria on Wednesday.

NEW STREET FOR WORTH

The Good Fellowship Club and many of the progressive citizens of Worth have requested the Village Board to open up Worth street from 11th, through to 167th. It has been conceded by all who are interested in the development and progress of Worth that this is a much needed improvement to open up the land on each side. Our Board are supposed to be in sympathy with the improvement of the village. Many are looking forward to their action in this. It will be their opportunity to demonstrate that they are with the good citizens in their wishes.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Illinois Press Association

In spite of the fact that Illinois has no one waiting to die in the electric chair, the state is going forward with plans for the construction of the death dealing devices in the Joliet and Chester penitentiaries. State Architect William Lindstrom is the man who will design the chair. The bill abolishing hanging in Illinois and providing that persons sentenced to death shall be electrocuted says that it shall apply only to crimes committed since July 1 of this year.

Since the passage of the law, a number of persons have applied for the job as official executioner, but the law does not provide a salary for such work. One offer to sell the state an electric chair was turned down and the state will build its own.

It is the aim of State Architect Lindstrom to make the death chamber somewhat attractive; his original plan has outlined arrangements by which a group of buttons would be placed in position, one of them connecting the current which would snuff out the life of the one convicted. By this means, several persons would push the buttons upon signal from the prison warden.

Legal questions came up and have been decided by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom. They have caused changes to be made in the original plans. The attorney general has held that only one person can act as executioner, hence the use for only one button. This phase of the law says, "The warden of the penitentiary, wherein the execution is to occur, shall supervise such execution and may, in writing, with the approval of the governor, specially designate and appoint a suitable and competent person to act under his direction, as executioner in any particular case."

Chicago will be the poultry capital of America November 28 and 29, when the National Poultry council and allied organizations convene, according to Stillman J. Stanard, director of the state department of agriculture.

This convention of poultry specialists is scheduled in accordance with the plans of other sessions of national importance in the poultry industry. On November 30, a conference of agricultural department officials and others from all states is called to discuss plans for uniformity in state regulation governing official recognition of quality and freedom from disease in poultry flocks, hatcheries and chicks.

The Coliseum poultry show, a competitive exposition of the nation's finest specimens, is also scheduled for the week. In this exhibition, poultry judging teams compete for honors. The national association of state marketing officials and the Live Stock Sanitary association also hold their annual meetings in Chicago.

"The diversity of interests relating to the production and marketing of poultry and poultry products, represented in the various sessions planned, assures that each will be of outstanding value to the industry," Director Stanard states. "Illinois is fortunate," he adds, "in that these meetings of national interest and importance convene within the borders of our state, thus enabling more of us to attend."

Codification of the statutes of Illinois from 1870 to the present time is a task confronting DeWitt Billman, secretary of the Illinois legislative reference bureau. The task was imposed upon the department by an act of the last session of the general assembly and a special appropriation of $25,000 was made.

Plans for revising the statutes which is now a very large volume have been under consideration for some years. The movement has been endorsed by a number of legal organizations and this bill after being presented to the general assembly, was approved by both branches and signed by Governor Small, June 29 last.

Leslie Small, director of purchases and construction, and William Mulvihill, superintendent of waterways, received bids recently for the construction of a miter lock and other equipment in the Illinois waterway near Starved Rock. The bids, which were taken under consideration were as follows:

Independent Bridge company, Pittsburgh, $429,580.

Ashton Russel & Co., Chicago, $509,900.

Duffern Iron company, Chicago, $545,162.

Bids for the construction of an aqueduct to carry the L and M canal over Aux Sable creek near Morris were received as follows:

Milwaukee Bridge company, Milwaukee, $11,000.

Frandsen Construction company, Chicago, $13,989.

Ketter-Elliott company, Chicago, $17,500.

Secretary of State L. L. Emmerson has been sending to the 1,040,000 motor vehicle owners of the state, applications for automobile licenses for 1928. Thirty thousand letters were put in the mails just recently as the first of the series.

The plan was decided upon recently with a view of giving service to automobile owners as early as possible next year; each blank is accompanied by a return envelope together with a letter from Secretary Emmerson.

The license plates for 1928 will have white figures on a field of maroon.

Means to which debt-ridden counties may resort to clear themselves of financial obligation were dealt with in an opinion recently by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom. While the ruling handed down referred to the situation in Jackson county, it is equally applicable to others in the state that are not collecting sufficient funds to pay actual operating expenses. The attorney general handed down the following rulings:

County boards may make additional appropriation, whether or not there is money in the treasury to meet these appropriations, since money usually is not in the treasury when appropriations are made, but is collected later from taxes, fees, etc.

It is within the authority, and the duty, of county boards to create funds and levy taxes to pay the debts and obligations of a county so long as the total amount does not cause a rate in excess of the statutory limitation of 25 cents on the $100 assessed valuation. If sufficient funds are not raised in this manner the obligations may be paid in annual installments, not exceeding ten.

Income other than taxes, such as excess fees of county officers, may be appropriated by the county board in advance of their collection.

A special county fund, such as the tuberculosis fund, may not be used for another purpose even when the fund should show a surplus after all expenditures have been made. But if a surplus exists in an appropriation from the county general fund, the surplus would revert, at the end of the fiscal year, to the general fund and be used for other purposes.

County clerks may not issue county warrants unless there is sufficient money in the treasury to pay the warrants. Neither can they issue "certificates of indebtedness" to claimants. These would be, the attorney general held, a mere gesture, since if a claim is allowed that fact is apparent from the records of the county board and does not need a "certificate" to make it valid.

Funds derived from the sale of anticipation warrants cannot be rightfully applied to any other purpose, even the payment of prior indebtedness.

Bids will be opened late in November on the construction of 44.86 miles of pavement, 15 bridge sections and 1.45 miles of grading by the state division of highways, it has been announced recently. The work was specified as follows:

Paving.

Route 14, section 5-X, Franklin county, .50 mile near Benton.

Route 48, section 112, Iroquois county, .65 miles near Ridgeville.

Route 49, sections 141, 142 and 143, Kankakee, Will and Cook counties, near Manteno, Peotone and Monee on the 40-foot road running from Kankakee to Chicago, 16.95 miles total.

Route 102, section 102, Adams county, 3.27 miles near Camp Point.

Route 116, section 103, Woodford county, 3.98 miles near Benson.

Route 145, section 101, Massac county, 4.10 miles near Metropolis.

Route 153, section 101, Washington county, 5.63 miles near Hoytston.

Also a section 3.89 miles long connecting Routes 13 and 151 near Cutler in Perry county.

Bridge Sections.

Route 49, section 112-B, Iroquois county; Route 49, sections 141-B, 142-B, Kankakee and Will counties; Route 145, sections 101-B and 101-C, Massac county; Route 153, sections 10-B and 101-C, Washington county.

Grading.

Route 145, section 101-A, Massac county, 1.45 miles near Metropolis.

Gov. Len Small and members of the Illinois flood control delegation have returned to Illinois from the national capital where they appeared before the house flood control committee in efforts to get congress to curb the turbulent waters of the Mississippi and its source rivers. Representative W. E. Hull, Illinois, headed the spokesmen from this section in stressing the need for protective measures.

A new attack on the state primary law, which threatens a revival of the old pre-convention methods of selecting candidates for public offices, was launched in the Cook county courts recently. The instrument filed was a petition for an injunction to restrain the county clerk and county treasurer of Cook county from incurring and defraying any expenses in connection with any primary under the law recently enacted.

NEW LAWS OF ILLINOIS

[This is a continuation of the list of bills that were passed by the Fifty-fifth general assembly and have received the signature of Governor Small, or have been allowed to become laws without his signature.]

Senate Bill 200 (Barr). Regulates the installation, alteration and use of electrical equipment. Provides for municipal inspection departments and electrical commissions. Penalties.

House bill 558 (Sullivan). Amends section 6 of the local improvement act of June 14, 1897, by providing that it is lawful for the city council to provide by ordinance that the board shall consist of the mayor and any two or more commissioners in any city of less than 75,000 population (previously 50,000) which has adopted the commission form of government, irrespective of whether the offices of public engineer and superintendent of streets are provided for or not in such city.

Reported Finding of Indian Rock Carving

What is described as the largest specimen of petroglyphs, or Indian rock carvings, in Canada, has just been reported to the archeological office of the Canadian National museum at Ottawa. This carving is said to be 250 feet long and located near Yale, British Columbia.

According to the reports, it is carved on a vertical face of reddish rock, sheltered by an overwhelming ledge. It is about half a mile south of the eastern end of the Alexander bridge on the Caribou highway, and near the Canadian National railway. A trout fishing trail from which it can probably be seen runs up in its direction.

Previously, the largest known rock carving was located on the west side of a seventy-foot canyon about one mile south of Mackenzie highway, in the "Norway of Canada," near Bella Coola, British Columbia. If the 250-foot carving is verified efforts will probably be made to have the region set aside as a national monument.—Boston Transcript.

Scientist Will Spend Three Months on Floe

As winter's chill draws nearer, would you swap your comfortable home for a dwelling on an iceberg? That is what John B. Simpson, British scientist, has just done, according to Popular Science Monthly. With a dog and a phonograph for company, he recently left England with the intention of making his home for three months on an ice floe.

"My purpose," Simpson said, "is to gather material for a book on the ice fields. I expect to be very comfortable on some drifting iceberg. I shall erect a fur-lined tent, and warm it with an oil stove. I have plenty of reading matter and a phonograph." Where his frigid domain will drift to, Simpson has no idea; however, he says he has a collapsible rubber boat which would keep him afloat in an emergency.

OAK LAWN

The first meeting of fathers, mothers and teachers was held at the school auditorium on Thursday evening, November 10th. A short program consisting of recitation in geography by the eighth grade, a group of piano solos most artistically interpreted by Miss Walker, our musical director. A short business session, then a talk by our lovely Mrs. Edmonds, regional director of District 19.

Mrs. Edmonds talk was on the "Seven Fold Plan", the seven cardinal objectives of education as laid down by the National Education Association. They are:

(1) Health — urging physical examinations of children before entering school and high school.
(2) Worthy home membership. Urging fellowship with our children.
(3) Mastering of the tools of learning.

(4) Useful citizenship which is an attitude of mind expressed by interest in one's community.

(5) Vocational effectiveness. Urging guidance during formative years.

(6) Wise use of leisure. Urging that we as parents, watch our children at play. For thru their play they put in practice their understanding of the principles of fair play.

(7) Ethical character-stressing that character is the noble life purpose toward which we would direct the growth of our children.

Mrs. Edmonds sketched this plan in such a graphic and striking way that we could not fail to realize that better trained parenthood is one of the main objects of Parent-Teacher Association work.

TRINITY LUTHERAN CHURCH
OAK LAWN

On Sunday, November 20, services at Trinity Lutheran Church will be held as follows: Sunday school will meet at 9 o'clock. At 10 o'clock a preaching service in the English language will be conducted. At 11 o'clock a German service will be held. On Thanksgiving Day an English service will be held at 9 o'clock and a German service at 10 o'clock. That is done to give all our people an opportunity to worship. And the services are held at such an hour that your dinner or your trip to friends is not interfered with. You are always welcome to worship at Trinity Lutheran church.

Turkey Prices
Show No Increase

The annual procession of Thanksgiving turkeys from the farm to the holiday table is under way. The festive birds are arriving at warehouses. Feathers are flying in dressing plants or on farms where shipments are made direct, railroads have commandeered freight cars to rush shipments to the large distributing markets where the wholesalers and retailers will complete the job of supplying the holiday demand.

But the Thanksgiving bird may be a little late in arriving because the recent warm wave prevented them from maturing. The general turkey crop of the country is about five per cent smaller than it was last year, but Texas again has come to the rescue with a crop 10 to 15 percent larger than last year according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute of Chicago, which has just completed a survey of the turkey situation. Idaho, Utah and California are three other states where the crops are bigger than last year, but all the other states east of the Rocky Mountains show a reduction, the largest decreases being in the states east of the Mississippi River. Indiana, Illinois and Minnesota report decreases of 13.13 and 11 percent respectively. In the other midwestern states and in the south the decreases range from 6 to 8 percent, according to the Institute survey.

Indications are that the turkey for the Thanksgiving dinner will not cost any more this year than it did in 1926, but the survey tends to show that the farmer will have another season of high prices. Average prices paid farmers have been on the up grade in recent years, reaching 32.8 cents a pound in December 1926. Country prices paid to Texas farmers last year started at 23 to 25 cents a pound, climbing to 27 cents as the top just prior to Thanksgiving. By Christmas the prices had soared to 37 cents. Opening prices this year started at about the same level as in 1926, the Institute finds, but dealers are not inclined to believe that the later market will follow last year's trend and soar as high as last Christmas.

one of the older and respected citizens of our community passed into eternity on Wednesday, November 2. He was the son of Henry Aulwurm and Bertha nee Hock and was born in Worth, Ill., July 21, 1865. His youth was spent in Worth.

On February 9, 1886 he was united in marriage with Marie Sals. It was at this time that he moved to Chicago, living there for about 5 years. He then came to our village and lived here for about 35 years.

That he was respected and held in esteem by his fellow citizens is shown by this that they elected him to several offices, namely: Justice of the Peace, Tax collector, School director and road Commissioner.

About one year ago he became afflicted with a stubborn illness. The best of medical aid and the tenderest care was in vain. His age was 62 years, 3 months and 11 days.

Those to mourn him are: His widow, three sons, Arthur, Irvin and Alfred, one daughter Ella. His Mother, four brothers, four sisters and three grand children.

The funeral service conducted in Trinity Lutheran church, was attended by many people. Burial took place in the Lutheran cemetery on Burr Oak Ave. Rev. J. H. Prange, officiated.

It was a very severe shock to her many friends to learn on last Thursday, November 10, of the sudden death of Mrs. Ella Peterson. Only since the Tuesday before had she been ill.

Mrs. Peterson, nee Plahm was born October 31, 1903 in Worth Township. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Plahm. On February 14, 1923 she was united in matrimony with G. Monroe Peterson. This union was blessed with two daughters, Lola and Irene.

That she had many friends who held her in high esteem was shown in connection with the funeral. The floral pieces were many and beautiful. The funeral was held in Trinity Lutheran Church on Saturday, November 12, the Rev. J. H. Prange, officiating. The burial was in Mt. Greenwood cemetery. Those to mourn her besides her husband are her two daughters, her parents, three brothers, one sister and her husband's mother.

Mrs. Peterson was 24 years and 11 days old at time of death.

Mrs. Wm. McVain of 55th st. has returned from the Mercy hospital after having been badly hurt in an Automobile accident some few weeks ago.

Mr. Carl Larson former owner of Larson Coal Co., is building five new bungalows in our town.

The L. N. R. Beatty Lumber Co., is welcome to our town. We know promising and enterprising men of their caliber are a great asset to our village.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. F. Ryan have returned from Kentucky and Tennessee after a three weeks absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Axel Peterson are entertaining at their home Sunday a number of friends from Chicago and Oak Lawn in honor of Miss Clara Hosman.

Mrs. Jack Schultz entertained a number of little folks in honor of her little son's birthday.

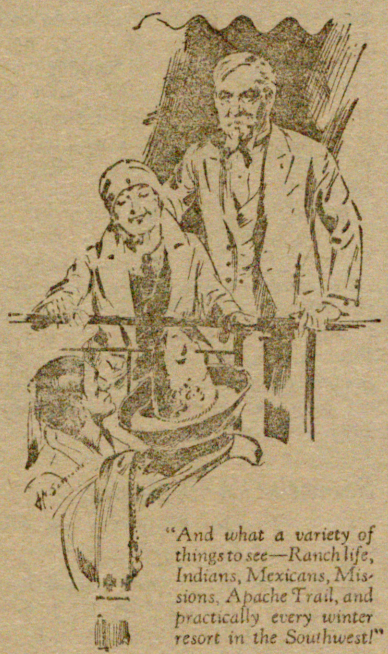

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hill are contemplating moving in their new home for Thanksgiving.

The card and bunco party given at St. Gerald's church was a wonderful success.

Oak Lawn is having an influx of new residents. Some eleven families moved in our town in the last month.

MOKENA

Miss Mildred Butler was pleasantly surprised Saturday night, when friends and relatives from Joliet, Broadview, Hinsdale and Mokena came in to remind her of her sixteenth birthday. Games were played and prizes were given to high score. Late in the evening a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess mother Mrs. J. R. Butler. Many beautiful gifts were received. At a late hour the guests departed for their various homes wishing Mildred would have many more such happy birthdays.

MOKENA M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Glen T. Beatty, Pastor.
Sunday School 10:30 A. M.
Evening Worship 7:00 P. M.

The pastor announces the first of a series of sermons on the general theme: "Unknown Books of the Bible." The first of the series is: "A Prophet of Doom and a Prophet of Love." These sermons deal with some of those books of the old Testament which many Christians never read, and which are a little hard to understand. These sermons will prove of interest for the reasons that they will help those who are interested, to understand the books and because they will bring much inspiration for living the best life in the modern day. The various books to be preached upon will be: Amos and Hosea; Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Isaiah.

Because of the 60th Anniversary services coming so close to the Christmas Holidays, the Methodist Sunday School is not planning the usual sort of Christmas program. They plan to leave the children as free as possible for participation in the Community Christmas Program and Tree which is again being fostered by the Parent-Teacher's Association. The Certificates of Attendance and Awards will be presented by the Sunday School at a specially planned Sunday School on Christmas morning. The pastor and officials believe that with special emphasis upon the 60th Anniversary, the above plan will prove very helpful to all concerned.

The plans for the Anniversary are taking form, and articles will be found in the paper each week showing the development, and final progress of those plans.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Lauffer who have been ill with the grip, are slowly improving.

Mrs. Milton Krapp is still in the Wesley hospital in Chicago, and is still quite ill, following an operation three weeks ago.

A number of Mexicans who have been working on the Rock Island

Railway section in Mokena expect to leave Sunday for their home in Mexico for a visit.

Jacob Knupp is excavating for the basement of a new house which he is going to build on the north side of his residence.

A bunco and card party will be given in St. Mary's hall on Friday evening November 25th.

The Mokena public school will give a Thanksgiving Day program in the school next Wednesday afternoon.

The young hurricane of last Friday afternoon which went thru this territory, at an 80 mile speed, did little damages compared with its appearance. Some farm wagons standing in barn yards, sign boards along highways were blown over. The two little sons of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sass of Marley, were driving home from school with a pony and cart and were blown to the side of the road and stunned. Mrs. William Semmler and neighbor, Mrs. J. Horrace were driving on the Lincoln highway near Frankfort, but were very fortunate in not being hurt.

Mrs. Fern Allen, former Mokena resident, died in Chicago last week following an operation. She is survived by one son Edward, three sisters and one brother.

Present tendencies In Religious Thought

By Rev. Paul T. Sanders
Pastor, Orland Park-Worth Parish

The Modern Thought World
The modern thought world might be classified under two distinct movements, science and democracy.

The scientific movement dates back to the days of Aristotle. The development at first was slow, but in more recent years it has led to wonderful discoveries in the field of religion as well as all other fields of thought.

The democratic movement like science has had its roots in the past, and only in more recent years has it shown great development and strength. In the past fifty years democracy has undergone a decided change due to the fact emphasis has been placed on the so-called political side of democracy. There has been much criticism of it because of this change but the essential spirit has remained the same.

The term democracy has been used in three distinct senses political, ethical and dynamic. The political sense is the way in which it is usually thought of, and yet the ethical sense which means the sacredness of the individual is equally as important. It is also necessary to consider the dynamic factor which is social progress through our own initiative.

These factors of science and democracy which also involve the social and socio-economic interests in life have had quite an effect on the development of religious thought. Because of this it has been necessary for Christianity to adjust itself to the changing order. There has been no essential conflict between science and religion, only as man has misunderstood it.

Each has had a decided influence upon the development of the other.

The religious thought reaches its climax in Christ and through him carries its chief influence into human life.

The Problem of Biblical Authority
Modern thought is autonomous, recognizing no external authority superior to the human mind. It finds in experience, reason, and utility the sole source of truth. Religion on the other hand in its historical form is authoritarian in its tendency. Its authority however is used in the field of moral and spiritual elements of life.

There is different types of authority in the religious field pedagogical, sociological and epistemological. This authority in the religious field has been attached by science. The conflict between the two arose between the natural order and the direct authority of God, as understood by the early church fathers. Christianity took over this authority of the Jewish fathers. This was changed some in the reformation and the authority of the bible was held over against the authority of the church.

Modern science has changed these views into the study of the bible from a critical standpoint. The infallibility of the bible has been challenged and a new approach has been made. God reveals himself not only through the bible but in nature and personal experience of man as well. The bible is considered as authority in its field but not as infallible authority.

It stands not in conflict with scientific authority but supreme in its own field. The climax of its authority is reached in Christ.

Experience as the Basis of Religious Belief

Experience is the basis of reason and to the scientific mind it is the final court of appeal. Religion must be based on experience but there is a question as to whether experience is the sole judge.

Theology and natural science will never mix because while experience is a good guide it is not an absolute one in determining the best of knowledge. Theology has been interested in the acts of God in particular while psychology is interested in the acts of man. The experience of man, since the reformation, has been held in higher consideration in the theological thought.

Schliermacher was the first to bring out the interest in the empirical principle. He defined religion as a feeling of absolute dependence.

There is a connection between religious experience and faith as one is dependent on the other. This leads to a belief in mysticism which is a part of the self verifying power of faith.

The essential element of religious belief is the religious experience as lived in a human life. This demonstrates to us that it is good and from that we are satisfied that it is divine.

Reason as a Basis of Religious Experience

There are two schools of thought concerning the kinship of reason and experience. One is known as the empiricist and the other as the rationalist. The empiricist group hold that experience is the sole source and ground of knowledge. The rationalist contend that certain principles of reason cannot be deducted from experiences and be valid.

This conflict between these two schools of thought is very old, in fact it goes back to the ancient Greeks. These fields of thought have developed similar tendencies in the field of theology. This has aroused a conflict in the field of religion as traditional empiricism has been hostile to religion. Religion in itself is a matter of experience and experience that cannot always be proved.

Empiricism in its traditional form furnishes no bases for a belief in God or in immortality. Reason and rationalism also have had their effect on the religious thinking in their critical attitude toward it. This difference has been changed some in recent years however and we are arriving at a new rationalism in religion. This rejects some of the supernatural and yet allows for the experience of the individual. The two are dependent on each other now and together form the new religious viewpoint.

The Social Gospel and its Theological Implications

Experience, reason and utility are the great tests of truth in the modern world. These tests at first tended to undermine religion. Religion has now met their attack by so enlarging the meaning of experience over reason as to find in the above the basis for religious belief.

Religion is a social creation, as it was created by society to safeguard its own interest against the individual. In this religion protects the individual and yet consoles him and makes him better able to enjoy life.

This subordinates the individual to society and causes society to advance to a higher social level through the religious ideal.

James E. Creer, our enterprising market and grocery proprietor has added a wonderful new electric machine to his already efficient equipment. The new machine is a meat and bone cutting machine which does away with the old fashioned way of cutting soup bones, chops, and steaks, which often times requires several operations such as cutting the meat with a knife to the bone, then sawing the bone or using the meat cleaver. The new machine is equipped with a fine steel saw which is driven by an electric motor. The meat is placed on a moving carriage which carries the meat against the swiftly moving saw blade which cuts thru meat and bone in an instant. The machine has a capacity of cutting sixty pork chops in a minute. As the steak or whatever meat is being cut, drops from the saw it falls into a large platter like receptacle. A gauge regulates the thickness or thinness of the meat to be cut. Steaks cut on this machine are of a uniform thickness and therefore benefits the housewife as she saves time in frying the steak as it all fries evenly at the same time.

Mr. Creer figures that the machine is a big time saver as meat has to be handled only once on this cutter. Time saved by this one operation can be used on waiting on more customers. Mr. Creer has an electrically equipped shop now. In addition to this new meat cutter he has an electric slicing machine used in slicing ham, bacon, sausage, etc., and an electric hamburger grinder.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste it's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs but no child of this writer's is going to test them! CHAPTER XIII—Continued

It stripped down to this: If the police found Galbraith at Elkwan Garth Guthrie was done. Cameron might fix it with the company, but the authorities would be merciless. Then the smug Charles could revel in his "I told you so's," and Ethel—he had not thought of Ethel, whose Christmas letters he had not answered, since he found Joan Quarrier on the Albany clearing—she could thank Heaven for her lucky escape.

"But the police won't find him at Elkwan!" Guthrie rasped through his teeth, and went to the trade-house to make his plans with Etienne.

"Did you have any trouble getting him up here?" Guthrie asked.

"No, he holler some, but he was lashed in good."

Then Guthrie explained the part Etienne was to play when the police appeared. They would want to interview him, and must find him in bed, a sick man. Accordingly, he must have the bandages, which Miss Quarrier would prepare at once, ready to put on. The children would have to be coached and kept out of the way.

"Have you ever been badly hurt, Etienne?"

The half-breed smiled and opening his shirt, drew them back, baring a long scar across the muscular chest.

"At Henley house, at de New Year dance, I get dis, manee year ago. I was ver' seek dis. I know. W'en pencee dey come, I be ver' seek man once more."

Guthrie laughed outright at the gravity of his head man.

"Trust you, Etienne, to act your part anywhere! Now if we could only keep them away from my quarters, but I've got to feed them there. That's where the danger lies. He may make a noise. He'll have to have an opiate to keep him quiet. If they hear him, it's all up with us."

Savanne took the pipe from his mouth and leaned toward his chief, the muscles in his swart face knotted with the intensity of his feeling. For a space the two men hardly breathed as the narrowed eyes of the half-breed bored into Guthrie's guzzled gaze. Then Etienne said slowly: "You are good frien' to me an' my familie, I feex dese pencee—if you—say so."

Slowly, as he read the stark sincerity of the offer in the other's face—sensed that his friend of the dusky skin was bringing to the altar of their friendship the supreme gift, the hazard of his life, Guthrie's eyes softened with the affection which two years of river and coast and trail with Etienne Savanne had kindled. He reached out a long arm and took the sinewy hand of the other.

"I won't forget—my friend."

The swart face of the half-breed lit with pride at the words, then turning away, he threw over his shoulder: "I get de bandage from M'a'mselle Quarrier an' show Marie how to mak' good nurse."

"His temperature's risen to 103. I can hear it in the other lung now."

Joan Quarrier entered the living room, from which Old Anne had taken the supper dishes.

"Double pneumonia!" Guthrie muttered. "Not a chance, after the flu, is there? Poor old Craig! We've done what we could."

She raised her eyes to the man who slouched, head in hands, elbows on knees. "Friendship is a very real thing to you."

He looked up. "Yes, so real that without a thought of the cost to you, I brought you into this."

"That was rather a fine compliment to me, Mr. Exile, that you should feel sure of me—know that I would feel."

"I thought only of him—of what I owed him." For an interval he was silent, then continued with a look that brought the blood to her face: "You?—I knew you would come—when you understood. But it was unfair—wrong."

"Why wrong?" she demurred. "Etienne or this man, what did it matter? You needed me to help you and I came."

"But I've done worse still. If the police find him here, you'll be subject to the law—an accessory. I did not think. I was mad, but I want to get you out of this before it's too late. I'll take you to Albany tomorrow."

As Joan Quarrier stared at the speaker, her surprise slowly shifted to anger. The dark eyes lit with a look new to the man who watched.

"You mean that? You think I'd desert him, dying, your friend?"

He shrugged hopelessly in the face of her determination. "You're in a false position. I had no right."

"Stop!" she commanded, raising her hand in finality. "Now, if they come, what will you do?"

For a space he could not answer, swept by a wave of pride in the staunchness of the girl of whom he had asked so much.

"I've got to feed them here. Can you keep him under an opiate?"

"Yes, he's under one now. If he grows delirious, as some do, he'll injure himself—try to get up. We'll have to keep him lashed to the bed."

"I'll get them over to the trade-house as soon as they eat. They may not stay more than a night, but when they fall to find his body at the schooner, they'll want to see me."

"I gave Etienne his bandages and showed Marie how to adjust them."

"What a wonderful coconspirator you are, Healer of Wounds! How am I ever to repay you?" He sat from habit with the unmarred left side of his face quartering on the girl. Suddenly she straightened, startling him with the tenseness of her look.

"Why do you sit that way?" she demanded angrily.

"What—what do you mean?" he asked, confused by her tone.

"You treat me as if I were—oh, like the one he came back to." She pointed toward the adjacent sickroom.

Vaguely her meaning dawned on him. Scars—to her—were an accolade. Those straight eyes of hers never turned in horror from a wound. "Forgive me," he said, and his eyes pleaded with mist. "I knew the day I met you—that you saw beyond—the scars."

For an instant her face was radiant with a look that stirred the man with the mad desire to go to her—take her in his arms—wring from this woman who doubted him—his love, the admission that she too cared. But no, not here, his ward and guest, helpless to avoid him. His chivalry checked his impulse. She knew he loved her; she should have fair play at Elkwan.

Muttered words from the sick man drew them to his bedside. The great frame, banded by strips of cloth to confine him in his delirium, rendered the bed he lay on insignificant. His heavy russet hair, smoothed by the nurse from his wide forehead, framed the deep blue eyes which stared, unseeing at the ceiling of the room. Below leered the torn mouth, ghastly in its distortion.

"We were happy—before," they heard him mutter. "I know—I know—it was hard. But couldn't you bear it—for the sake of the old days? Handsome Galbraith—it was—once. Then—that shell! Good-by, Handsome Galbraith!—But you—I loved—needed. Your eyes! God! the look in them—when you saw me!"

The eyes of Joan Quarrier and Guthrie met. Two tears, ignored, slowly wet her cheeks. The face of the man was twisted with pity.

"What hell he must have lived through!"

"And she—why are such creatures put into the world?" said the girl, huskily. "When his need of her was greatest—she unmasked her little soul."

Involuntarily Garth Guthrie started. How unerringly she had characterized Ethel. Had she guessed, he wondered.

"I can guess what followed," Garth replied. "I know him. Heart-broken—he often spoke of her—he went to drink, to forget. Then it happened."

"But after all, are they sure he's the man?"

"The circumstantial evidence puts it beyond question—the description, his being here in the north."

While Joan caught a few hours' sleep in the room of Guthrie which he had again given her, the factor sat beside the unconscious man, whose tortured lungs labored for breath.

Before she lay down the girl stood quizzically before the photographs which still stood in their places on his dresser.

"You're very lovely," she murmured. "It's not strange that he can't forget you. He still remembers or you'd not be here—still remembers, although he wants me to think he has forgotten."

CHAPTER XIV

In early afternoon Etienne swung back the trade-house door with a crash.

"Dog-team on de riviere!"

"All right," replied Guthrie. "Tell Miss Quarrier on your way. Now you get into those bandages and into bed, and don't have the children around if they come to talk to you."

"I am ver' seek man," laughed the half-breed and went out.

So the police had come? He hadn't expected them for days, but they must have reached Albany from Moose the day he left. They certainly hadn't lingered at the schooner with Cameron's men; mystified at failing to find the body of McDonald, they probably wanted to talk first to the men who had discovered the tragedy, then return to Seal Cove.

They would pass at least one night at Elkwan to talk it over. There was no alternative to having them eat at his quarters. There lay the danger. He would rush them through supper and to the trade-house where they would sleep, as, of course, Joan Quarrier had his spare bed. Etienne's accident they would have heard of from Cameron, and Etienne and Marie were more than equal to entertaining them with the picture of a man suffering from a painful wound. The rub would come at meal time. Would the opiate keep McDonald quiet—and his breathing—would they hear it? If only he could have been moved for a day, but where? The trade-house, factor's quarters, and Etienne's were the sole heated buildings at the post. Going to his quarters, he called Joan and Old Anne.

"Anne, you can't speak English—don't answer any questions. Understand?" The broad face of the cook stretched in a smile as she winked. "Nana," she answered in Cree.

"Good!" And when you hear us come in for supper, make as much noise as you can in the kitchen. Sing all you wish, rattle the pans. When you wait on us, talk to me in Cree—all the time. See? They may hear him breathe."

"Enn-eh!" replied the Cree.

"How is he now?" Guthrie asked Joan.

Her eyes reflected her anxiety. "Worse—much worse. Raging fever—105; pulse running away. He's been straining terribly at his bonds. Lucky you and Etienne made them strong."

"You gave him the opiate, of course?"

"Yes, he's feeling it now. By supper time he'll be quiet—but his breathing?"

"That's what worries me," Guthrie went to the sick room where the giant, bound to his bed by thick bandages of cloth, lay moaning in a half stupor. "Old Craig. To finish like this!"

Sorrowfully, the man who was imperiling his future that his friend might have his chance went out to meet the approaching dog-team.

all the time. See? They may hear him breathe."

"Enn-eh!" replied the Cree.

"How is he now?" Guthrie asked Joan.

Her eyes reflected her anxiety.

"Worse—much worse. Raging fever—105; pulse running away. He's been straining terribly at his bonds. Lucky you and Etienne made them strong."

"You gave him the opiate, of course?"

"Yes, he's feeling it now. By supper time he'll be quiet—but his breathing?"

"That's what worries me," Guthrie went to the sick room where the giant, bound to his bed by thick bandages of cloth, lay moaning in a half stupor.

"Old Craig. To finish like this!" Sorrowfully, the man who was imperiling his future that his friend might have his chance went out to meet the approaching dog-team.

With Shot beside him, curious of the strange dogs, Garth watched the visitors climb the cliff trail behind their team of scrubs.

"Good day!" called the older of the two men, stepping forward with extended hand. This is Mr. Rawdon. The speaker nodded to his companion, a young, heavily built man, who shook Guthrie's hand.

"I've been expecting you," said Guthrie. "You can turn your dogs into that empty shack after you've fed them. They'll be safe there. My only assistant, as you know, is laid up."

The dogs fed and safeguarded from the big Ungavas of the post, Guthrie led his guests to the warm stove of the trade-room.

"You come straight from Seal Cove?" he asked carelessly. "They were expecting you when I left Moose with Miss Quarrier."

"Dog Team on the Riviere!"

At the mention of Joan's name, the heavy face of Rawdon lighted with interest.

"Yes," replied Farrel, lighting his pipe. "We went over to the island with Cameron's people who are guarding the fur. But, of course, we wanted to talk to you and your man before we got down to work."

"Got down to work? What do you mean?" Guthrie's cold eyes studied the face of the inspector. A decent face, he thought, honest, human.

"Why we found only three bodies. Cameron says you found four, including McDonald's. McDonald's wasn't there."

"McDonald's body not there? Impossible!"

"No, we made no mistake. The Indians must have spirited it away. They tell me there's a fortune in fur on that schooner, too, but there's no sign of its being plundered."

The watchful Guthrie had his opening and lost no time in developing it.

"Why, we left McDonald dead in his berth, from flu, I suppose. Breault was in the cabin, and the other two in berths. The interpreter and a sailor they claim were on the boat must have made for the nearest camp. Did you search the ice? The Indians might have buried him. He had some Indians picking up fur for him on the island. They may have found him and given him a decent grave in the ice."

"That's true, but why should they leave the rest on the boat?"

"He was the big man—the chief. He had a great hold on them. That might explain it," Guthrie suggested. "Well, I wonder what they've got for you hungry men to eat," he added. "Make yourselves at home while I go over and ask Old Anne when she'll be ready for us."

"By the way," called Farrel as Garth opened the door. "How's your man, wound all right? He can talk, can't he? I want to get his statement."

"He's doing finely—thanks to his army nurse. She saved him from infection."

They were waiting for Garth at the house. Her eyes shadowy with strain and anxiety, Joan met him at the door.

"The morphine? Is it working?" he asked.

"He's quiet now, but I don't know how long it will last. It seems lost on him. I've given him all I dare."

"His temperature—pulse?"

"Awful! I don't see how he lives. It looks like the crisis tonight."

"I can't bear him breathe. Is supper ready? I'll bring them in and rush it through."

"Yes."

As he turned to go out he heard a

sob. She stood at the door of the bedroom.

"To think he should die like this!" she said.

Guthrie strode back to her. He took a limp hand in both of his. "Healer of Wounds, I love you! Courage!" And he went out.

At the trade-house door his set face dropped its lines.

"Well, Old Anne is about ready for us. It's short variety but I hope there'll be enough for your appetites. I'm sorry, but I'll have to put you up here. Miss Quarrier has my extra room."

As Joan Quarrier, pale, but mistress of her nerves, met them in the living room with a forced graciousness and was introduced, the eyes of Rawdon bulged in patent admiration of the picture she made. Fair women are rare where life is hard, and his evident surprise at finding the ex-army nurse who had wintered at the mission at Albany of such comeliness, seemed temporarily to paralyze his tongue.

Appearing on the minute with the stew, Old Anne filled the room with the harsh sibilants of the Cree tongue.

"Don't mind Anne," Guthrie laughed, making conversation as his guests ate. "She's a bit queer in the head, but her heart's all right, isn't it, Anne?"

Anne turned upon him a chaos of chatter. From the kitchen, where she went for the boiled goose, the staunch old Cree kept up a rattle of pans, until she hurriedly returned to resume her conversation with the man whose ears strained for sounds through the shut door of the sick room.

As yet no sound from the room. Thus far—victory!

"Well," said Farrel, comfortably, as he finished, "your cook may be a bit talkative, Guthrie, but I sure have enjoyed her supper."

"Glad you have. Sorry it wasn't better."

"And you've got to run to that half-breed?" demurred Rawdon, now quite at his ease with Joan. "I don't see why you can't stay a while and talk to us."

"Oh, a nurse always puts duty before pleasure, Mr. Rawdon," she replied, with a stiff smile, as with tilted head she waited, nerves taut as wires, for the repetition of a sound she had heard—a sound incomprehensible, terrifying, from the closed room.

"Well," he laughed, "that's what I call a compliment. But you'll be back soon?"

"Back soon, you whelp!" cursed Guthrie inwardly. "If you don't finish that food, I'll choke you with it!" Then his heart skipped—to shake him with its hammering, as he heard a thud—a sound of ripping cloth. Raising his voice, he said sharply: "If you're through, gentlemen, we'll have a smoke beside the trade-house stove," and with Farrel, rose from the table where Rawdon lingered, hypnotized by the face of the girl who sat rigid with fear.

Guthrie flung open the door, admitting the biting air. "Rawdon!" The words snapped through the silent room like the crack of a whip. "Miss Quarrie has a dressing to do for Savanne." Then behind the shut door, a crash, curses, a groan froze him, desperate, where he stood. The game was up. He had lost!

"Why, what's that? Somebody in there?" demanded the younger policeman, rising, head thrust in the direction of the sounds. Gray-faced, Joan Quarrier, like one under a spell, watched the hawk-like features of Guthrie harden—saw the gray eyes grow cold, as the surprised Farrel turned to his host.

"Get Etienne, quick!" Like the ring of tempered metal the voice of Guthrie crossed to the Cree in the kitchen door. She disappeared.

"What's this all about, Guthrie—this racket in there?" stormed Rawdon, heatedly.

As the bewildered Farrel waited for Guthrie's answer, his eyes widened as he saw the groping fingers of the factor of Elkwan, who leaned against the gun-rack, find and close on the butt of his automatic.

Then with a crash the door of the bedroom was thrown back, and a giant figure, shreds of cloth hanging from naked shoulders and arms, swayed, head lowered, in the doorway. Burning with fever, the wild eyes above the grinning mouth glared with the ferocity of a mad beast at Rawdon, who instinctively recoiled from the diabolic countenance thrust toward him. Gripping the door jams for support, the great muscles of his arms flexed, Laughing McDonald shook the room with a roar: "Give 'em the steel, Canadians! Steel for their gas! Give 'em—" With a gasp, a hoarse rumble of the deep throat, a choking cough, the massive frame pitched headlong to the floor.

On her knees beside the man whose pulse she could not feel, sobbed Joan Quarrier. Gripping the relaxed hand of the friend he had failed to save, Guthrie listened for a heart beat. There was none. Laughing McDonald had joined the silent battalions.

"He's gone?" he asked the girl, while the policemen, dumb in their surprise, gaped at the two figures with their dead.

She nodded.

"Gentlemen," Guthrie turned his face to his guests. "You are too late. Your man has escaped."

"Stan' back!"

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

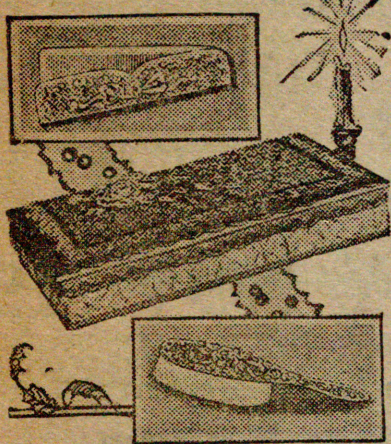

Says Backache Often Means You
Have Not Been Drinking
Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irrit

What to Give at Christmas Time

Ornate Dresser Things

Ideal for gift occasions are exquisite articles which show French inspiration in their elaborate finishings of gold lace and satin gartered with flowers of superb silks and ribbons, all displaying a superior handcraft. Christmas will be a time for rejoicing for the debutante or bride who receives anything so beautiful as the dresser utility box shown in this picture, covered with taffeta silk veiled with all-over gold lace, garnished with a cluster of handmade taffeta roses. The comb case and top of brush are made to match.

Glass and Crystal Sets

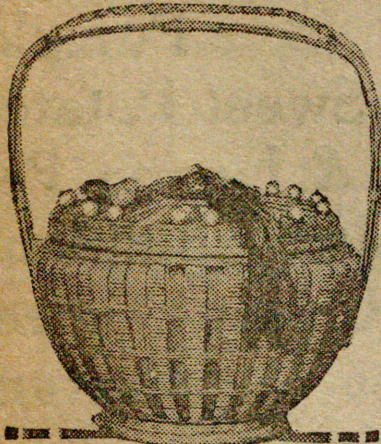

Glass flowers strike a most modern note in smart decoration. Transparent, luminous, lovely are these flowers made all of glass even to their slender stems. Only in the most exclusive shops are they to be found, which is directly in their favor if you are seeking a gift for some fastidious friend. Not only flowers, but exotic birds whose plumage is a solid setting of glittering glass jewels, and who are posed on sparkling crystal mounts, are among these decorative elegancies.

Gifts for Baby Dear

When it comes to "the dear little dimpled darling 'who' has ne'er seen Christmas yet," Santa Claus is simply lavish in his giving. "Something different" from the regulation silk or kidskin bound baby book are those which specialty shops are featuring of white pique with an applique of wee satin roses. The ribbon carriage strap and coverlid clamps, which complete this baby set, are made of satin flowers.

Baskets Make Nice Gifts

There's a lure in cunningly shaped baskets which no "homey" woman can resist. What's more, the modern interior decorator lays great stress on the ornamental qualities of the fanciful basket. In the shops one sees, this season, a more-than-ever fascinating array of baskets which are awaiting to have Christmas greeting cards tied to their handles. A basket like the one in the picture is roomy enough to hold one's knitting or "pick-up" embroidery and as to socks to be darned, "it covers a multitude of sins" of this sort.

Texas Bandit Queen Unhandicapped by Sex

Fully twenty years before American women besieged the White House, the capitals and the villages until they got the vote, one American woman considered it proper for a woman to "fill a man's shoes." If she could do it. She was Belle Starr, the Calamity Jane of Texas, styled by some newspapers of the time the "Queen of the Bandits."

Belle was once asked why she, a woman, undertook to play the part of a man in the Starr coterie. She took her pistol, pointed out a leaf on a nearby tree and shot two holes in it before it fell.

"Did you ever see my husband do that well?" she asked.

"No."

"Then why shouldn't I take his place? Because I'm a woman? That's no argument. If you get a thing done, does it matter whether you're a man or a woman? I've no patience with these silly women who depend on men for their opinions."—Kansas City Star.

Huge London Waste

The amount of waste in a large city was shown in a recent survey made in London, where 1,500,000 tons of refuse are gathered and dumped each year at a cost of $3,500,000.

Engineers told the councilmen that if the waste were treated scientifically about one-half the cost would be avoided, important by-products would be supplied, and, if the dry refuse were burned, at least 332,000,000 units of electrical power could be produced.

FLAT FURS TRIM CLOTH COATS; VELVET FOR EVENING WRAPS

FUR-TRIMMED cloth coats are hitting the high spots of the mode this season. The term fur-trim "doesn't mean anything" until one sees the coats themselves, and then—well, it means so much of daring originality and unusualness one gets a thrill of "something different" at every turn of the mode.

Of course the long-haired furs are sumptuous and very decorative and good style, but for pure unalloyed chic the flat furs are carrying a tremendous share of the honors. Stylists are paying attention in the fashioning of many of the newest coats to such furs as beaver, caracul, krimmer, astrak-the fur, they strike a new note in coat styling.

No handsomer evening wraps are being shown this season than are those made of sheer velvet. How about those alluring creations of gold and silver cloth, say you? Well, if you simply cannot choose between a wrap of sheer velvet and one of gorgeous lame brocade, why not have both? Let it be a two-in-one proposition of velvet lined with metal cloth. First you wear this side out and then you wear that. A very economical way of arriving at luxury, it would seem. Many a woman of fashion is doing just that, ordering made or buy-han, shaved lamb, seal, registering intriguing novelty in spotted effects which feature calf, zebra, leopard and other curious pelts.

Not all the novelty interest, however, centers in the furs and the materials they trim, for in their styling every tricky little device is introduced that imagination can conjure. As an example of artful fashioning note the cuff of gray astrakhan on the clever coat of English cloaking to the right in this picture. What a clever touch the buckle and belt of cloth imparts to the deep fur cuff! The long stole collar of seal on the other coat with its matching cuffs also interprets the best and the newest in fur trimmings.

Perhaps it may add to your enthusiasm to know that these fifty coats are being worn these cool autumn ing ready-made if she patronizes shops of distinction, an evening coat or wrap which is reversible.

Some women are even clever enough to make their own evening wraps. There's a great deal can be done when one has a "knack" of sewing, for after all, the beauty of the new velvets are enough to insure the beauty of the evening wrap made either at home or abroad.

Seems as if the supple new velvets fairly coax to be shirred, which of course calls for many yards for the making of a garment. The accompanying illustration demonstrates the effectiveness of shirring. This wrap, which is a Paris creation, is an exponent of all that should be in the way of styling gorgeous velvet.

The majority of velvet evening wraps emphasize an interest in deep days by two of Hollywood's most charming screen artists, Aileen Pringle (to right) and Dorothy Sebastian. "Nuff said" when it comes to identifying them as "last word" styles.

Speaking of fashionable flat furs, have you seen the latest—moleskin dyed a dainty beige to match the suede-finished cloth which it trims?

Here's a cunning idea in coat styling, namely, the bordering of the coat all around the hemline and up and down the front with spotted leopard. And oh yes! about the new chin collars lined with thin fur, some of them having long scarf ends bordered with armholes and flowing sleeves. The more elaborate models sometimes display sleeves of metal brocade inset into the velvet body of the wrap. Another handsome version is that of the evening coat all of velvet, the sleeves elaborated with an all-over patterning of gold braid or embroidery.

At any rate the importance of decorative sleeves is very evident in the mode. Likewise fur trimmings are accented, and if not handsomely furled, then luxurious ostrich collars enhance the evening wrap.

ANNUAL PRUNING OF APPLE TREES

Bearing apple trees in fairly vigorous condition in the well-kept apple orchard need a light but thorough annual pruning to keep them in proper shape, says A. Freeman Mason, fruit specialist of the New Jersey Extension service. If the trees are properly pruned each year, they will never become thick and bushy, and the pruning job will be relatively simple.

This annual pruning will consist principally of the removal of water sprouts and small interfering branches. The latter occur principally in the outer portions of the tree, where heavy crops have caused branches to be permanently bent down or across other limbs. Twigs which hang down underneath, or arise from the top of and lop over along the branches, should be removed first. This thinning out of small branches should be very thorough.

Occasionally it will be necessary to remove one or two large limbs, but usually the pruning can be accomplished by cutting branches not larger than an inch in diameter. When in doubt about any cut, it is generally advisable to remove the branch.

If the tree has reached a height of twenty feet or more, any upright branches in the top running above this height should be removed in order to limit the tree to an economical size. Occasionally it will be desirable to head back lateral branches for the same reason. All dead and diseased wood should be removed, although the amount of such wood will be very small unless the trees are quite old or have been badly neglected. Pruning may be done at any time until growth starts in the spring.

Thin Raspberry Canes for Good Crop Next Year

The taste of fresh raspberries is still with us.

"Start right away if you would have a big crop next summer," says C. L. Kuehner, fruit specialist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, in giving a few simple directions for the care of the bushes.

Remove all canes which bore fruit in the summer is the first recommendation. Also remove all new growth which is affected with anthracnose and cane borer. Borer-infected canes can be detected by the borer holes. Anthracnose can be recognized by the small spots which are gray in the center and reddish and slightly raised on the edges. A spray solution of one gallon liquid lime-sulphur to nine gallons of water, applied in the spring, is also useful in controlling this disease.

Red raspberries should be left in rows, removing all except the huskiest canes and allowing four to five inches between canes in the row.

Neglected Vineyards Hit by Parasites and Fungi

One of the several insect and disease pests which was serious in neglected vineyards during the past season was the grape berry moth, according to A. S. Colby, University of Illinois. In some of the older vineyards this pest was found at work in the fruit clusters. By working into and through the grapes, the larva of this insect made the bunches unfit for sale.

Another insect which must get more attention in some vineyards next year if the most profitable crops are harvested is the phylloxera, a tiny root louse which also causes galls to form on the leaves of the vine. This insect is spreading slowly through the commercial grape growing regions on susceptible varieties such as Janelle and Bacchus. Seasonal conditions seem to have some influence on its spread.

Prune gooseberries and currants directly the fruit is picked.

Because apple prices are good this year and there is little sales resistance, the "Apples for Health" campaign should not be allowed to lag.

Grape vines produce fruit from the buds on the growth of the preceding year. If this is kept thoroughly in mind it is reasonably easy to prune grape vines.

More than 200,000 known kinds of insects attack trees. In the United States alone it is estimated the loss from caterpillars, beetles, borers and other insects amounts to $100,000,000.

Trees that are unhealthy because of crown gall should not be used for grafting purposes, but should be destroyed.

For the planting of blackberries, raspberries, currants, gooseberries, and strawberries, spring planting is generally preferred.

Before putting the orchard or garden spray machine away for the season it is a good idea to clean the tank and working parts, oil the pump and oil and loosen all threaded parts.

MICAH CHAMPIONS THE OPPRESSED

LESSON TEXT—Micah, chs. 2, 3 and 4.

GOLDEN TEXT—What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What God Wants Us to Do.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What God Requires of Us.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What God Requires of Us.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Prophetic Interpretation of Religion.

Micah prophesied during the reign of Jothan, Ahaz and Hezekiah, in Judah, but his message largely concerned Israel. He is called the prophet of the poor. He proclaimed impending doom upon the workers of unrighteousness and heralded the coming of the Messiah.

1. Evil Workers Denounced (2:1-3).

1. How they worked (v. 1).

Their evil work was not a matter of impulse, but of deliberate purpose.

(1) It was conceived in their mind. They gave themselves to the devising of wicked schemes.

(2) They worked evil upon their beds. They used the quiet hours of the night while honest people were sleeping for planning ways to work out their schemes.

(3) They executed their plans in the morning light. Having power to carry out their schemes, they did what their wicked minds devised.

2. What they do (v. 2).

(1) They covet fields (v. 2).

In this they violated the tenth commandment.

(2) They violently take fields and houses.

A covetous spirit will eventuate in such deeds unless restrained.

(3) They oppress a man and his house (v. 2).

By house is meant a man's descendants, the inheritors of his property.

3. Their punishment (v. 3).

Against such evil doers God is devising a righteous retribution which will fall upon them with such weight as to humble them.

II. Upon Whom Judgment Shall Fall (3:1-12).

1. The unfaithful rulers (vv. 1-4).

Because of love for the evil and hatred for the good the rulers mercilessly destroyed the people.

2. The false prophets (vv. 5-8).

They served for hire. As long as supplied with food, they prophesied to please the people.

3. The judgment which is to fall (vv. 9-12).

Jerusalem was destroyed because of the sins of the people. Just as the righteous retribution fell then, we can be assured that there will be no escape from the coming judgment for those who destroy the people.

III. God's Controversy (6:1-13)

Wicked men may go on to a certain time with their schemes, but eventually the Lord's requirements shall be met.

1. The hills and the mountains called to bear witness against Israel (v. 2).

The people had turned a deaf ear to God so that inanimate creation was called upon to witness against them.

2. The guilty party left to state the case (v. 3).

The King of the universe abdicates His rights and allows His sinning people to make charges against Him.

3. God recounts His mercies unto the people (vv. 4, 5).

Having paused for the charge and none having been brought, the Lord thrust home upon their conscience the memory of His great mercies.

(1) He brought them out of Egyptian bondage (v. 4).

He has done even more for us who were under bondage to sin and Satan.

(2) Sent before them a trio of leaders (v. 4).

Moses, the lawgiver; Aaron, the high priest, and Miriam, the prophetess, were sent to bear witness.

(3) Turned Balak's curse into a blessing through Balaam (v. 5).

4. God's requirements (vv. 6-13).

(1) The great question, "Wherewith shall I come before the Lord?"

The Jews could not deny the charge brought against them by the Almighty.

(2) The complete answer (v. 8).

a. "To do justly." Strict equity was to characterize all their dealings with their fellowmen.

b. "To love mercy." The heart was to be diligently set to do good to our fellows.

c. "To walk humbly with thy God." This means to recognize that we are sinners before God, with no claim upon Him except His pardoning love.

Spiritual Power

Spiritual power is developed in action, just as muscles are developed.

The more we try to help others, the more firmly shall we be established and the more we shall grow.—D. L. Marvin.

To Regenerate the World

The only way to regenerate the world is to do the duty which lies nearest to us and not to hunt after grand, far-fetched ones for ourselves.

—Charles Kingsley.
